Broadcasting/Cable Yearbook '89

The BROADCASTING/CABLE YEARBOOK '89 shares with its predecessors the distinction of being the most comprehensive directory to the Fifth Estate. It covers the history and continuing growth of every field in the industry. To acquaint readers with the structure of the Yearbook, and to assist in locating information, the editors have provided general descriptions of each of the nine major sections: The Fifth Estate, Radio, Television, Cable, Satellites, Programing, Advertising and Marketing, Technology, and Professional Services. In addition, the editorial index, expanded to be even more inclusive, begins on the following page. The general index is followed by an index to advertisers in the 1989 Yearbook. These are grouped according to service. Finally, each of the nine sections has a complete index on the first page of the section.

Section A: begins with "The Fifth Estate," the history and evolution of the broadcasting media. The "Short Course in Broadcasting" (A-3) provides a capsulized summary of the industry. A description of new technologies follows, reviewing recent and ongoing developments in broadcast technology. A subsection on Law and Regulation follows on page A-8, covering the Federal Communications Commission. It includes an organization chart of the FCC, names of its staff members, an extract of its principal rules and a guide to station application procedure. Government agencies of interest to the Fifth Estate are listed, including both the U.S. and Canada. A list of state cable regulatory agencies follows. The Group Ownership directory is a list of individuals and companies with multiple station holdings. Section A concludes with the directory of newspaper and magazine crossownership and crossownership by station.

Section B: The Radio section of the Yearbook begins with the directory of AM and FM stations in the United States, followed by stations in U.S. territories and Canada. Information on U.S. International Radio, the Voice of America, American Forces Radio and Television Service (AFRTS), and Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty (RFE/RL) is included here. Listings provide call letters, address, telephone number, programing information (including, for the first time, information on news programing and target audiences), and names of principal executives. Cross-reference lists of AM and FM stations by call letters and frequencies for the U.S. and Canada follow this directory. The frequency cross-directories have been expanded to include power and antenna information for both AM and FM stations. New this year is a guide to college or school-owned radio stations. Following is the table of FM assignments. Section B concludes with a guide to Arbitron's 261 radio markets.

Section C: This is the Television section of the Yearbook. The first part, "The Facilities of Television," begins with detailed directories of TV stations, addresses, telephone numbers, names of principal executives, with cross-references to the appropriate ADI's (Areas of Dominant Influence). Among the other features of this section are lists of U.S. and Canadian stations by call letters and channels, lists of both independent and stereo TV stations, the table of TV assignments, a complete history of TV station transfers, a list of pending TV station applications, and information on experimental TV stations. There is also a section on Low Power TV (LPTV), listing LPTV grants, licensees and addresses. Following these directories is market-by-market data from the Fall 1988 Arbitron station viewership survey. The second part of Section C, "The Television Marketplace," describes the commercial aspects of the medium, and has as its primary feature the "ADI Market Atlas," a 75-page section showing each of the 212 ADI's according to Arbitron Television. It is complete with coverage maps, and other important market rankings. Concluding the section are tables of market ranking by size, markets by Nielson Marketing Research, and network delivery variations by market.

Section D: The Cable section of the Yearbook contains detailed information on cable systems throughout the United States and Canada. The "Anatomy of Cable Regulation" opens the section with an outline of federal cable television rules. On page D-3, "A Short Course in Cable" provides a concise summary of the industry. The cable listings provide the system name, address and phone number, names of principal executives, area served, type of TV market, statistical data, channel usage, information about pay cable and other types of programing, and ownership. Also in this section are a directory of Multiple System Operators (MSO's), a list of Broadcasters in Cable, a chart of the Top-50 MSO's, and a chart of cable penetration by market.

Section E: The section on Satellites begins with the list of satellites currently used by North American owners and operators. Included in the section are lists of satellite owners and operators, resale and common carriers, teleports and direct broadcast satellites. The section finishes with a directory to satellite programers and networks and cable programing services, including pay, basic, automated, audio-only and regional sports services.

Section F: This is the Programing section of the Yearbook. First is a directory of producers, distributors, and production services, followed by a list of international program producers. Addresses, telephone numbers, and names of principal executives accompany the listings. Other program-related material includes sections on music licensing groups, closed circuit TV, and major awards. Part two of this section provides major network directories with radio and TV affiliates. Next are sections on public broadcasting, Canadian networks, regional radio and TV networks, news services and radio format services. Next comes a directory to radio stations according to formats and special programing. Section F concludes with a breakdown of format and special programing by state, and a chart comparing format use by AM/FM and commercial/noncommercial.

Section G: The Advertising and Marketing section presents directories of advertising agencies handling major radio and TV accounts, media/planning services, U.S. and Canadian station representatives, and Industry Standard Commercial Identification System. Listings include address, telephone number, principal executives and branch offices. The section concludes with tables that provide information about radio and TV audiences, audience composition, and set usage.

Section H: This, the "Technology" section, begins with a list of U.S. and international equipment manufacturers and distributors, and continues with listings of frequency measuring services, videotext operations, teletext operations, videotext and teletext software and hardware suppliers, automated-channel suppliers, computer services and broadcast automation systems, and a directory of companies providing mobile production services. These listings include addresses, telephone numbers, and names of prinicipal executives. Next are lists of common carriers including land line, microwave & multipoint distribution services. On page H-58 a chart shows the growth of broadcasting., and on page H-72 a chart shows television and radio set sales from 1958-1985. The last part of Section H begins on page H-61 with the 1989 Buyer's Guide, the yellow pages, a commercial directory to equipment, programing and broadcast services.

Section I: is divided into three parts-Professional Services, Associations, and Broadcast Education. Part one provides listings of brokers and consultants, station financing firms, research services, technical consultants, law firms and attorneys in communications law, public relations services, talent agents, and employment services. Part two, Associations, begins with the National Association of Broadcasters and includes trade organizations, professional associations and societies, and unions. Broadcast Education, part three, opens on page I-55 with broadcasting schools. The section continues with reviews of recently published books related to the Fifth Estate. Section I concludes with a list of colleges and universities offering degrees and courses in radio and television.

Note: The dollar volume figures represent total considerations reported for all transactions with the exception of minority interest transfers in which control of the stations did not change hands and stations sold as part of larger company transactions, such as the Capcities buy of ABC. All sales have been approved by the FCC. Also, prior to 1978, a combined AM-FM facility (replaced last year by Groups, see below) was counted as one station in computing the total number of stations traded. Now, AM-FM combinations as well as groups, are counted by their individual stations.

*Prior to 1971, figures represent total number of deals involving both radio and television stations. Beginning in 1971, when the FCC's one-to-a-customer rule, prohibiting the sale of co-located TV and and radio stations, became effective, figures represent the total number of separately located TV and radio stations that were sold in packages. In 1985, the mergers of large groups with interests other than broadcast stations could not be evaluated, since individual station values were not broken out of the larger sales. Group sales totals are now limited to compilations of "pure" stations sale—those only concerning TV and radio stations.

Broadcast Operation

Frequencies and Station Assignments—Radio frequencies differ in characteristics, and each service is assigned to a frequency band to suit its needs.

The AM aural service, sometimes called standard broadcast, occupies the band from 535 khz to 1605 khz. Radio waves travel with the same speed as light and are of different "frequencies" (cycles per second) and "wavelengths" (distance between points in successive cycles). "Frequency" and "wavelength" vary inversely with each other. The latter term was formerly used generally to describe a particular radio wave, and still is in some other countries, but in the United States the use of "frequency" is much more common. The usable frequency spectrum has constantly expanded upward with developing technology, so that what were once "high" frequencies are near the low end of the total spectrum used. AM stations are assigned at 10 khz intervals beginning at 540 khz, providing 107 frequencies.

FM broadcasting occupies the frequencies from 88 to 108 mhz, with 100 channels of 200 khz width each, the lowest 20 of them reserved for educational use. Both the center frequency (e.g., "93.1 mhz") and the designated channel number from 201 to 300 are used (e.g., "channel 201" is "88.1 mhz"), although channel numbers are not in popular usage since they are not on FM receivers.

In television, where wider channels are required to carry both picture and sound, each channel is 6 mhz wide. The very high frequency (VHF) portion of the television service occupies the frequencies 54 to 72 mhz (channels 2, 3 and 4), 76 to 88 mhz (channels 5 and 6) and 174 to 216 mhz (channels 7 through 13). The ultra high frequency (UHF) portion of the television service occupies the frequencies from 470 to 890 mhz (channels 14 through 83). Designated channel numbers identify the frequency assignments (e.g., 54-60 mhz is "Channel 2"). There is no "channel 1" in television.

Although "AM" and "FM" are often used to refer to the standard broadcast and FM broadcast services, these terms more properly apply to the methods, "amplitude modulation" and "frequency modulation," used to impress aural or visual intelligence on the carrier wave. The "AM" principle is used not only in the standard broadcast service but also in the picture portion of television and in the international "shortwave" service. The "FM" principle is used both in the FM broadcast service and in the sound portion of television.

In all the broadcast services, the same aural or visual channel can be used in different places if the stations are far enough apart not to interfere with one another or with stations on adjacent or technically related channels. A TV station may be required to "offset" 10 khz above or below its normal carrier frequency. The channel assigned to such a station is then designated "plus" or "minus" as the case may be. This makes more TV assignments possible and reduces the possibility of interference.

AM and FM systems—Without being too technical, this is how an aural station works.

A person talks into a microphone as if it were a telephone. His voice sets up vibrations of varying intensity and frequency. The lower the pitch the slower the vibration. A cycle, or wavelength, is one complete performance of a vibration.

In the microphone, these vibrations are converted into electrical impulses which are then greatly amplified at the transmitter before being put on the "carrier" wave. The intensity and frequency of the carrier wave are constant. This wave, by itself, does not transmit music or speech, so it is varied to correspond with fluctuations of the speech or music received at the microphone. This is called "modulation."

In AM broadcast, the audio waves are impressed on the carrier wave in a manner to cause its amplitude (or power) to vary with the audio waves. The frequency of the carrier remains constant. This is known as amplitude modulation. In frequency modulation (FM), the amplitude remains unchanged but the frequency is varied in a manner corresponding to the voice or music to be transmitted.

These modulated waves radiate from the antenna tower at approximately 186,000 miles per second (the speed of light). Some of them follow the contour of the ground and are called "groundwaves." Others dart upward and are called "skywaves." At night, the skywave portions of transmissions in the standard broadcast (AM) frequencies are reflected back to earth by electrical particles in the "ionosphere" portion of the atmosphere. This gives the listener a choice of more distant AM stations at night, but also increases

A short course in broadcasting, 1989

There were 10,461 radio stations operating in the United States at the end of 1988. Of these, 4,932 were commercial AM's, 4,155 were commercial FM's and 1,374 were noncommercial FM's. There were 1,395 operating television stations: 544 commercial VHF's, 514 commercial UHF's, 120 noncommercial VHF's and 217 noncommercial UHF's. Most commercial TV's are network affiliated; approximately 402 operate as independents.

No single entity may own more than 12 stations in each service (AM, FM or TV). In TV, the entity is permitted to own 12 TV stations as long as they don't reach more than 25% of the nation's television homes. UHF's are assessed for only half of a market's television homes. Group broadcasters who buy interests in stations more than half owned by minorities are able to own up to 14 stations in a service, and are able to reach 30% of the nation's television households through their TV's, as long as two of the stations in each service are controlled by minorities. Newspaper owners may no longer purchase broadcast properties in the same market, nor may radio station owners acquire TV stations there, nor TV owners radio outlets. TV stations may no longer acquire cable TV franchises in the same city, and networks may not own cable systems at all.

In 1987, according to estimates by the Television Bureau of Advertising and the Radio Advertising Bureau, commercial broadcasting had total advertising revenues of approximately $30.2 billion. Television advertising accounted for $22.9 billion (75.8%) of revenues; radio advertising, for approximately $7.3 billion (24.2%). Public broadcasting had a 1987 income of $1.29 billion—18.8% from the federal government.

In 1987 television billings for stations and networks amounted to $8,500,000,000 (national network), $6,800,000,000 (national non-network), $6,800,000,000 (local), and $800,000,000 (national syndication), according to estimates by the Television Bureau of Advertising. The Radio Advertising Bureau estimated radio billings for stations and networks were $371,000,000 (national network), $1,315,000,000 (national non-network), and $5,605,000,000 (local).

There are more than 90 million U.S. homes (98% of all homes) with television sets, about 68% of which have more than one set. About 87 million homes have color. It is estimated that about 63.4% of TV homes are equiped with a VCR, and that about 53.0% are linked with cable systems, according to Arbitron Television. (Further data on cable TV appears in "A short course in cable, 1989" on page D-3.) There are an estimated 527 million radio sets in the U.S., 342 million (65%) of them in homes and 185 million (35%) out of homes.

The average American home watches TV for six hours and 59 minutes a day, according to Nielsen Media Research statistics for the 1987-1988 season. And the latest study by The Roper Organization (commissioned by the Television Information Office) shows that 66% of the U.S. public turns to TV as the source of most of its news, and that 55% ranks it as the most believable news source.

The average 30-second prime-time network television announcement now costs $100,000 (spots on a top-rated series cost $200,000; low-rated spots average about $80,000). An estimated 120 million people watched the 1989 Super Bowl telecast. Thirty-second announcements during that event cost $675,000. Thirty-second announcements on individual TV stations range from $20,000 in top-rated specials in major markets to as low as $10 in the second-hundred markets. Radio spots costs from $1,000 or more in major markets to less than a dollar in small towns.

Group Ownership

Group Ownership

Listed here are individuals and companies with multiple station holdings. Included are all those controlling three or more radio stations and/or two or more television stations. FCC rules limit multiple ownership to 12 AM stations, 12 FM stations and 12 television stations, as long as the 12 TV stations don't reach more than 25% of the nation's television homes. UHF's are assessed for only half of a market's television homes. Group broadcasters may own up to 14 stations in a service if two of the stations in each service are controlled by minorities. Ownership of cable TV systems, as reported by these stations, is also listed. Unless otherwise noted, the first station listed is group headquarters.

Radio Markets in the United States

The following is the Arbitron population ranking for Spring 1988, based on market definitions at that time. It is based on the 1980 U.S. Bureau of Census estimates updated and projected to January 1, 1988.

The MSA number is the population of all persons aged twelve or older in the Metro Survey Area. The TSA number is thepopulation total of all persons older than twelve in the Total Survey Area. Following that are the call letters of stations which fall within the market as defined by Arbitron. The actual city of license for each station may be found by looking it up in either AM by Calls (page B-362) or FM by Calls (page B-371).

Certain market population totals are also imbedded in in larger nearby markets. It is therefore possible for a station to be listed in more than one market.

Radio Markets Ranked by Arbitron Metro Survey Area

This chart ranks the 261 radio markets by Metro Survey Area 12 plus population (see also the follwing chart of rankings by Total Survey Area). Figures are population aged 12 or older, based on the 1980 U.S. Census Bureau estimates updated and projected to January 1, 1988. Data reflects the Spring 1988 Arbitron market definitions.

* An asterisk following a market name indicates that the market is imbedded in a larger nearby market. See the Radio Market directory beginning on page B-429 for details.

Radio Markets Ranked by Arbitron Total Survey Area

This chart ranks the 259 radio markets by Total Survey Area 12 plus population (see also the preceding chart of rankings by Metro Survey Area). Figures are population aged 12 or older, based on the 1980 U.S. Census Bureau estimates updated and projected to January 1, 1988. Data reflects the Spring 1988 Arbitron market definitions.

* An asterisk following a market name indicates that the market is imbedded in a larger nearby market. See the Radio Market directory beginning on page B-429 for details.

TV Station Circulation

The following chart is based on the Arbitron Fall 1988 television station viewership survey. It is intended to provide a basis for comparison of viewership statistics from market to market. It is not intended as a replacement for current Arbitron viewership data. This data is subject to change, and the Fall 1988 numbers used here may vary widely from the results of subsequent surveys.

Further, it is not intended to be a comprehensive guide to the stations within each market. For various reasons data may not be present for a particular station in this directory. For a complete list of stations within a market, please see the ADI Atlas directly following this section. Please see U.S. Television Stations by Call Letters for the city of license for each station.

The first four columns refer to the percentage of total TV households in counties where the station is tuned in at least once a week. For example, the first column is the total number of TV households in counties where the station is tuned in by 50% or more at least once weekly. The 5% plus column is a total of the first three columns. Net weekly viewship is the number of households which tuned in that particular station at least one or more times during the week. Average daily circuation is the number of households which tune in the station on a particular day. Each total counts cable or satellite viewership outside the station's Area of Dominant Influence. Circulation figures were not available for every station.

Television Marketplace

The ADI Market Atlas

The Area of Dominant influence is a geographic market design that defines each television market exclusive of the others, based on measurable viewing patterns. Each market's ADI consists of all counties in which the home market stations receive a preponderance of viewing, and every county in the continental U.S. is allocated exclusively to one ADI—there is no overlap. The total of all ADI's represents the total television households in the U.S.

The ADI is a standard market definition. As a television buying tool it is a geographic and demographic means for maximum efficiency. As a station tool it has applications for sales, programing, and promotion planning.

Following, in alphabetical order, are Arbitron Televisions's 212 ADI markets for 1988-1989 with coverage maps for each; and county by county breakouts of TV households. Other data include the market's stations, their cities of license, channel numbers and network affiliations.

Coverage maps show total survey areas in light shading, the ADI's themselves outlined in black, and Arbitron Metro Rating Areas in white. The survey areas consist of all counties in which the home market stations are viewed to any significant extent, including via cable. The Metro Areas usually conform to U.S. Census Standard Metropolitan Statistical Areas.

Non-ADI markets do not meet Arbitron's criteria for having an ADI of their own; they are listed with the ADI of which they are a part.

A complete listing of the non-ADI markets and a cross-reference list of cities in multi-city ADI's appear on page C-145.

Non-ADI Markets

The following single county marketsdid not acheive ADI status becausethe preponderance of viewing is not to the home-market station. Neither did they meet the criteria of the 10% rule to become an ADI. The home couties in non-ADI markets are assigned to the ADI's that do receive the preponderance of viewing.
